

I am opposed to the CBA attempt to impose the federal "established business relationship" exemption on Indiana consumers. Indiana has one of the best protections from unwanted phone calls in the nation, and I appreciate it. If successful, anybody that I currently have a business relationship with (e.g., bank, credit card company, long distance carrier) will be able to call me as often as they want. That goes against the letter and the spirit of the law and is an invasion of my privacy.
